Introduction.....

As an ever increasing number of readers seek to go further into the field, they come again and again to the source of most of the presently available material, the science-fiction magazines.

Not only are an overwhelming majority of the hard-cover books reprints from the magazines, but numerous current magazines offer stories from the same sources.

Even in the case of new stories, either in books or magazines, an attempt to find more material by the same authors usually leads right back to the pages of the magazines.

It is to make this material more readily available that this book is presented.

Ironically, it is only because until recently science fiction had a small following, that this book was compiled. It is but brief years since the day when the reader of science fiction was considered no less strange than the tales he read.

In 1935, there were some 178 magazines on my shelves. I did not consider them a "collection". They were bought to read and kept for re-reading. They happened to include all that had been published since the beginning of science-fiction magazines as such, but that was because I wanted to read everything available in the field. With that many magazines, it was becoming difficult to locate specific stories for re-reading.

Had there been a sufficiently wide public for science-fiction at the time, someone would doubtless have issued one. As it was, such a professional publication would have been financially disastrous, as if anyone wanted an index, they had to compile it themselves. I did!

This original index was a modest thing, filling a mere drawer and a half with its approximately 1400 cards.

With only three publications at the time, two on a bi-monthly basis, keeping it up was no problem until the early '40s brought the deluge. By that time the magazines were a "collection" and the index was so impressive that it called, or rather demanded to be kept up.

The war years with the paper shortage cut down the indexing to where it could be handled, even to catching up on my return from the service.

Soon, however, the interrupted boom resumed and shortly the number of magazines surpassed even the 1941 total of 104 magazines under 20 titles.

Following attendance at the PACIFICON, the 4th World Science Fiction Convention in 1946, I had become involved as an active science-fiction fan. This led to organizational work, publication of an amateur fanzine, The FANSCIIST and in 1950, to the chairmanship of the 8th World Science Fiction Convention, the NORWESCON. All this activity somewhat complicated the task of indexing, though it taught me to get along without sleep, an ability which has proved invaluable in preparing this index.

It was the FANSCIIST that led directly to this work. Seeking to make available some of the material in the card-index, a department called AUTHOR, QUOTE was made a regular feature. This included for a different outstanding author each time, an autobiographical sketch, a photo and a complete bibliography of his published works. So popular was this feature, that investigations were made to find if it would be possible to bring the entire index to the public.

It may be of interest to briefly describe the method of compiling the index. The first step was, of course, to assemble complete files of the magazines. The principal difficulty here was in time lost in seeking non-existent issues. Many of magazines were published erratically. There were also such difficulties as when a publisher's error caused AMAZING STORIES QUARTERLY to jump from Volume 5, Number 3 to Volume 6, Number 4. Those "missing issues" were on the want list for nearly three years before the error was discovered.

The next step was to list the stories and articles on file cards. It was early discovered that stories were sometimes missing from the Table of Contents, or on occasion the title or author's name might be shown differently than on the story. To insure accuracy, the magazines were gone through page by page and the cards taken from the stories themselves. As soon as an issue was completed, the cards were rechecked against the table of contents.

Two cards were made for each story or article; one headed by the author's name, the other by the story title. Both cards contained such data as the length, magazine, date and, if a serial, the number of parts. These were alphabetically filed under author and title.

The files contained hundreds of entries concerning pseudonyms, compiled from various sources. In addition to the data itself, each card carried a notation as to the source of the information.

Nothing was taken for granted. The whole author file was gone through and inquiries made about all entries that had not been furnished by the authors concerned. All authors who could be reached were likewise asked about additional pen-names. In all, over 300 letters were sent just seeking or verifying pseudonyms.

In response to these letters many additional pseudonyms turned up. For each story under a pen-name entries had to be made on both title and author cards. In addition, cards had to be made cross-indexing the author's real name and the pen-name.

There is in my files a considerable mass of data on pseudonyms which does not appear in this volume. Doubtless much of it is correct, but unless it could be verified beyond question, it was omitted. There are also a few entries which do not appear at the author's request, or because they are in dispute.

The question has been raised as to why WEIRD TALES was not included in this index. The answer is simple. WEIRD TALES is not included in my collection. While admitting the desirability of including it and other fantasy magazines on the fringes of the science-fiction field, to do so would mean a delay of at least two years and a considerable outlay of money to accumulate a complete set of the back issues. I felt it was better to have an index to the science-fiction magazines now, than one including the weird field at some vague later date.

The final job was transcribing all this data from the approximately 29,000 file cards making up the index, while taking suitable precautions against mistakes.

In a work of this scope, it is inevitable that some errors will creep in. The publisher would appreciate hearing of any such as may be found as well as any additional information on pseudonyms for possible later release.

If you have gathered the impression that this Index represents a lot of work, you are so right. So much work, in fact, that no conceivable demand could have brought it about as a strictly commercial proposition.

This Index is primarily a labor of love and is presented in the hope that it will bring some enjoyment in the field of science fiction to an ever-widening circle of readers.

How to Use the Index.....

DON'T TAKE ANYTHING FOR GRANTED!!!

Familiarize yourself thoroughly with the following!

If in doubt, consult the Glossary of Abbreviations Used!

ALPHABETIC ARRANGEMENT

Alphabetic arrangement is by one of the many variations of standard Library indexing. "A's, "an"s and "the"s occurring at the beginning of a sentence are ignored. The balance of the title is considered in strict alphabetical order, except that all entries containing the same word are completed before passing to longer words containing the same letters.

Hyphenated words are considered as two words.

All abbreviations are treated as if spelled out ("Mr." as "mister", "St." as "saint", etc.)

Authors' names with the prefixes "de", "Mac", "van", etc. are treated as one word. "Mac", "Mc", and "M'" are all indexed as if spelled "Mac".

The INDEX BY AUTHORS

The Authors are listed alphabetically by last names, with a list of each ones' stories following his name. The by-line as it appeared on the stories is all in capitals. In cases where it appeared differently on various stories, the occasionally used portions also appear in capitals, but in parentheses. Example:

LONG, A. (AMELIA) REYNOLDS

indicates that the name sometimes appeared as A. R. Long and sometimes as Amelia Reynolds Long.

Where a portion of the name appears in parentheses and in lower case letters, it shows the author's full name, the uncapitalized portion not having appeared on stories. Example:

WELLS, (Herbert) George

shows that while his full name was Herbert George Wells, it always appeared on his stories as H. G. Wells.

Pseudonyms, if any, used by an author are listed following his name. Example:

ATCOCK, ROGER N. See pseudos: ROGER DEE (N),
JOHN STARR (N)

shows that Roger N. Atcock has used the pseudonyms "Roger Dee" and "John Starr". The number (N) following "Roger Dee" is the number of stories here indexed under this name. The number (N) following "John Starr" indicates no stories under that name are listed herein, the by-line having been used in a publication or at a date outside the scope of this Index. If the letter (N) also appears after a pseudonym, it indicates the name is a "house name", used by more than one person. In that case the (N) may be followed by either a number or a question mark, the latter showing that while the author has used the name, the number of stories is uncertain.

Pseudonyms are listed the same as real names, except that they are followed by the real name of the author, where known. Example:

ATRE, THEODORON pseud of JOHN FUSSELL PRANK

Under each by-line is an alphabetical listing of stories. Each entry includes the story title, length or classification, magazine, date and page number. A typical entry:

Perfect Weapon, The.....ASF Feb 50 46

shows that "The Perfect Weapon", a short story, appears in Astounding Science Fiction for February 1950 on page 46.

Under "house names", the stories by each known author are listed separately, followed by a listing of stories of unknown authorship.

Collaborations are listed separately and following the stories which each author wrote alone.

THE INDEX BY TITLES

Story titles are indexed alphabetically (ignoring initial articles). Each entry gives the title, author, length or classification, magazine, date and page number. Example:

WITCHES OF KARRES, THE by James H. Schmitz.....ASF Dec 49 7 shows that "The Witches of Karres" by James H. Schmitz, a novelette, appears in Astounding Science Fiction for December 1949 on page 7.

Stories appearing under pseudonyms are listed in the same manner, except that the author's real name (where known) follows the pseudonym. In the case of house names, the designation "A ps" follows the pseudonym and again the real author's name is given where known. Examples:

shows that the story is by Otto Binder but appeared under the by-line, "Gordon A. Giles".

WIRING LIGHTS OF 1945, THE by Gordon A. Giles ps (Otto Binder).....ASF Feb 51 120
Where a story appears under the author's first and middle names, the last name is entered in parentheses. Example:

2200 45 4 LIGHT by Robert Moore (Williams).....ASF Jul 57 36
shows that this story by Robert Moore Williams appeared under the by-line, "Robert Moore".

THE CHECKLIST OF MAGAZINES INDEXED

The Checklist is a complete listing of all the issues of the magazines covered in this index. The magazines are arranged alphabetically, except where name changes would break the continuity, in which case they are run together in sequence and cross-indexed. For example: Air Wonder Stories, Science Wonder Stories and Thrilling Wonder Stories are all listed with Wonder Stories.

Under each title is a listing of its issues, giving the date, volume and number, page size, number of pages and the name of the cover artist, where known.

In some cases, publications have been dated inconspicuously or not at all. In the first case, any dates shown are listed. In the latter, the year may be shown in parentheses, or the symbol "n/d" may indicate the lack.

If numbered by volume and number, both are shown; if no number only, that is given. Un-numbered issues are indicated by the symbol "n/d".

In some cases, particularly at the end of a year on quarterly magazines, there may be some confusion due to varying dates being given in different parts of the magazine. Except where no year is shown inside, the dates used are the ones taken from the Table of Contents page.

On the following pages is a list of the abbreviations used in the Index. Familiarize yourself with it thoroughly and refer to it when in doubt. For your convenience, it is repeated in the extreme back of the book.
